Silgan employees vote no on bid to join Teamsters Union

In a close race, workers at the Hoopeston Silgan Containers plant voted Thursday not to join the Teamsters Union.

Those voting not to join the union had a 15-vote majority. The final tally was 59-44 to keep the shop without a union.

Company officials would not comment on the vote. Union representatives could not be reached for comment at press time.

At stake was membership in Danville-based

Local 26 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, a union representing employees in manufacturing, transportation, warehousing and other areas.

Some Silgan employees began meeting with union representatives last December in hopes of improving the work environment, as well as salary and benefit packages. According to union representatives, employees have not received regular wage increases and benefits at the Hoopeston plant do not equal those at unionized Silgan plants.
