First Allied Securities becomes part of Wells Fargo group

First Allied Securities has been acquired by Wells Fargo & Co., a $315 billion diversified financial services company.

The acquisition was announced July 23.

The change will not impact local investors, said Gary Shore of the Hoopeston First Allied Securities office. "You'll still see First Allied on the door," he said, adding name recognition was one factor in the decision to keep the First Allied name.

The purchase will allow account executives Shore, his wife, Joyce, and Sharon Dixon, to provide a wider range of services to clients. "It's great to have a name like Wells Fargo behind you with the added services and opportunities," Shore said. "It's tremendously important to us because it opens up so many opportunities we haven't had before."

Wells Fargo services include mortgage, banking, insurance, investment and consumer finance services, while FAS Holdings, Inc., of which First Allied is a subsidiary, has offered full-service brokerage and investment services.

FAS Holdings, Inc., brings to the deal nearly 500 independent financial consultants in 50 states. Wells Fargo Private Client Services has 61 offices in 23 states; brokerage services are offered through more than 800 branch locations. Wells Fargo & Company has more than 5,400 stores.

The acquisition will not change customers' ability to receive tailor-made investments suited to their needs "rather than someone in the back room saying what needs to be pushed that day," Shore said.

"We're extremely happy about this," he said.

Hoopeston attorney contributes chapter to legal text

Hoopeston attorney Paul T. Manion has contributed a chapter to a legal text, Illinois Causes of Action - Elements, Forms & Winning Tips, recently published by the Illinois Institute for Continuing Legal Education.

Prominent trial attorneys throughout the state were asked to contribute chapters to the text, which basically outlines the elements of all substantial civil causes of action that can be maintained under Illinois law. General editors of the publication were Justice Richard P. Goldenhersch of the Illinois Appellate Court and attorney Timothy W. Kelly of Bloomington.

Manion's chapter deals with discovery actions with subheadings including "Petition to Perpetuate Testimony," "Discovery Before Suit to Identify Parties," and "Adding Respondents in Discovery."

Manion has previously authored text used by the University of Illinois Labor Extension Service. An impartial survey found him to be one Illinois' Outstanding Attorneys in 1995.

He and his wife, Bonnie, reside in rural Hoopeston.
