Country Terrace crowns royalty

"Now I know why God let me live so long...so I could be a queen."

With tears filling her eyes, Jeanette Carter uttered those words after being crowned queen of County Terrace at a Valentine's Day dinner Thursday.

Carter, 83, and Glenn Seymour, 95, were chosen for the honor by their peers at the independent living complex.

Royalty continued from other side

Seymour displayed a plaque listing kings and queens chosen since the event started in 1997 while Carter was given a floating broach, passed down to each queen, which was donated by Flowers and Gifts by Molly Culbert. The shop also provided the corsage and boutonniere for the winners.

The coronation, performed by last year's king and queen, Ty and Marge Lee, culminated an evening of activity, including a special dinner and accordion music provided by the Rev. Steve Nelson of the First Baptist Church.
