Auditor candidates discuss qualifications at Watch meeting

A Vermilion County official is trying for her fifth term as auditor while a Danville man hopes to unseat her.

Democrat incumbent Linda Lucas Anstey and Republican Curtis "Hank" Clow were the featured speakers at Monday's Hoopeston Neighborhood Watch meeting.

CLOW

ANSTEY

Clow came to Vermilion County from Olney in 1980 and has lived in Danville since 1997. He has an extensive background in bookkeeping and management, having worked at Knowles Truck Stop in Oakwood, then as office manager for Bill Smith Auto Parts and most recently, real manager for Courtesy Ford. He is currently unemployed.

"Dealing with the budget crisis" is the biggest challenge facing the auditor's office, making sure to "take care of the needs of the county and still live within that dollar," Clow said. If elected, he said he will seek bids for county supplies and keep "a low level of expenses. I feel I will be able to live up to that challenge," he said.

Anstey was appointed as auditor in May 1989 and has run in the last four elections, making her the senior county official.

Anstey is a certified public account, associate

Story time

Judy Fraser, chief weathercaster for WCIA-TV, reads to youngsters Friday as part of the Hoopeston Public Library's Summer Reading Club. Several adults turned out to meet the celebrity as well. Fraser told the audience she inherited a love of reading from her grandmother and passed that love to her own children.

As watchdog of county finances, Anstey said she doesn't mind making other county officials angry if that's what it takes to keep expenses low. In my position, everyday I figure I make one person mad," she
