Hoopeston woman trades in selling hamburgers for Hemis

Sue McGee knows a thing or two about driving.

For the last several years, McGee has driven to Crawfordsville, Ind., where she managed a Burger King restaurant.

That changed March 28 when McGee ended a 13-year career in the restaurant industry to become a sales consultant at Star Chrysler.

Whether it's selling sodas or Sebrings, McGee wants customers to be happy. To do that, she has been busily studying product lines, features of each and driving vehicles. "Our store is very caring and we do take care of our people," she said.

The offer to join the Star team was a surprise for the Hoopeston resident. After consistently working 12-hour days and driving 85 miles one way, McGee was tired. One day, Star owner Dick Read talked with McGee's husband, Bill, who asked how she was. He told Read, who in turn suggested she see him.

Mr. McGee called his wife, saying he had a job option for her but wouldn't tell her what it was. "I was literally ripping my brain out because I thought 'what could it be,'" she said.

After meeting with Read and Star manager Steve Mowrer, McGee accepted the position and began training, which will be ongoing. "They say it takes two years to really get a good grasp of it," she said.

Although relatively new to the job, McGee has adjusted from asking about condiments to engine size and options. She is particularly enthusiastic about Chrysler's new 300. "It's just an experience," she said. "It's a great experience. There's more excitement about this vehicle than anything else on the market now."

As part of the Hoopeston Auto Group, McGee can take customers to any of the three new

Although Star hours are 8-5:30 Monday through Friday and 8:30-1 Saturday, McGee said she will schedule appointments later or earlier and will take vehicles to people's homes or businesses so they can test drive the car or truck of their choice.

For McGee, the change in careers represents a slower pace and a chance to get reacquainted with Hoopeston and the surrounding area. "I'm 51 years old," she said. "It's time to start slowing down and having a life again. It's a nice career change. I think I could do this for a while."
