Winter storm socks Hoopeston for second time in a week

For the second Tuesday in a row, Mother Nature dusted...with snow.

All area schools and some businesses were closed Tuesday after nearly four inches of snow had fallen by early morning.

A blizzard warning was in effect until midnight Tuesday as snow continued to fall, coupled with high winds, with gusts estimated at 40 miles per hour, created deep snow drifts.

The work day started early Tuesday for city crews as they plowed streets, only to have more snow fall and winds whip plowed snow back into Hoopeston's roads.

Snow was expected to last throughout Tuesday and into the night.

Wednesday's forecast called for partly cloudy skies with northwest winds at 15 miles per hour with gusts up to 20 miles per hour.

The National Weather Service is predicting another chance of snow Friday night and Saturday.

High winds blow snow from rooftops Tuesday in the 400 block of East Seminary.

Call, or stop by and see why Anderson Funeral Home is proud to offer -
