Night work

Hoopeston Area High School art teacher Barbara Neutzmann, left, and Athletic Director Kevin Root, right, along with freshman art students Cory Coffman, foreground, Katelin Crabtree, center, and Samantha Vaughn and Sarah Dixon, back, paint a Cornjerker at the intersection of Main and Market Wednesday night. Root said city officials asked for the painting, which was done with the same paint used to mark the streets for entries in the Sweetcorn Festival Grand Parade. Neutzmann said it was the first of many projects the art club will do in the community.

Letters to the Editor

In response to barking dog letter

The reason your dogs are barking, along with all the other dogs in this city, is the constant parade of roaming cats. Cat owners just leave their cats run at will with no regard to neighbors. The city might as well tear up the cat ordinance. All it does is take up paper space.
