Hearts go home for the Holidays and memories of Christmas and Thanksgiving long past surface without search. My memories are blessings to me, and it was in the greenhouse early this grey November morning, as I was looking at all the artificial Christmas trees lined up on the benches, undecorated, but with the lights on, ready for someone to come in to choose and take home. I counted again how many different ones. I think it was 26, in sizes from 2' to 9' and half sizes in between, that I smelled the fragrance of the cedar trees my Dad used to cut from our own woods, make a stand and carry in to set, always in the same place in our living room. I didn't only smell it, my memory let me see it. Wasn't I lucky? I never push a good memory away.

That also reminds me that with all the cleanliness and ease and beauty of a prelit "permanent" tree, they don't have any fragrance. We can fix that, too, now. We have these scented cards of Balsam/Cedar to hang in them

Corrections

The Hoopeston City Council story in the November 19 issue contained incorrect information about the North Market Street project. After stimulus money is used, the city will split the remaining cost with the Illinois Department of Transportation picking up 80 percent of the cost. The rest will come from the city's Motor Fuel Tax money.

Also, the city slab will be open Monday-Saturday until December 15, then Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

The $10 savings on the sawhorses offered by Olympic Hardware is via mail-in rebate.

Just the Facts regrets the errors.
