Smart kids get SMART board through memorial donation

Hoopeston Area High School's honors math program will have the educational benefit of a SMART Board, the result of a memorial donation from Cellular One.

Cellular One made a donation for the purchase of an interactive white board in memory of Hoopeston resident Janet Carter, mother of Cellular One CEO/general manager Cassy Carter. Janet Carter died March 6 of cancer. The company and its employees contributed.

"We appreciate this donation to help the students of our community," said Superintendent Hank Hornbeck.

Family members recently presented school officials with a check for the equipment. Janet Carter's granddaughter,

Gabby Carter, in in the honors math program and granddaughter Cayley Martin has been accepted to participate in the program when she enters high school next year.

"It is our company's pleasure to honor the memory of Janet Carter," said chief financial officer Ed King. "While many in our company never had the pleasure to meet Janet, we certainly know she was a wonderful, caring and determined person. This is proven by these same qualities present in Janet's children and grandchildren."
