City offices, police department moved to new location

After decades at 229 S. Market. Hoopeston's city offices have a new home.

City employees moved Thursday and unpacked Friday at their new location, the former IGA building at the corner of Main and Second Ave.

The building bears no resemblance to its former use.

Gone are the long aisles and shelving, replaced with rooms for the water and police departments, along with a courtroom/city council meeting room and offices for judges, the city attorney, city council and job service.

The city spent approximately $300,000 on the new city hall, which was expected to be completed in April.

Some aspects remain unfinished, said Mayor Bob Ault.

Inside, a new console for police department communications will take three to six months to arrive

Also, some work remains in the cell area of the police department.

Outside, Ault said, landscaping must still be done before the project is complete.

Once employees unpack records and have everything in order, an open house will be held to show off the new building to the public, Ault said.

A date for the open house has not yet been set.

Volunteers honored, anniversary marked at Food Cupboard

Fifteen special people were recognized Friday for their contribution to a Hoopeston agency.

The special people, all volunteers at the Grant Township Food Cupboard, were honored at an Appreciation Day at the Food Cupboard office.

Volunteers recognized for their service include Carol Linvingston, Martha Smith, Roxie Page, Katherine King, Marge Beckner, Mary Franklin, Zola Sheffield, Katie Bobis, Susan Comstock, Jean Knapp, Gladys Cleveland, Eileen Vines, Betty Warf, Shirley Watson and Lynn Lohnes.

Carol Flint, Grant Township supervisor, hosted the event, which was attended by Food Cupboard, township and city officials.

The Appreciation Day not only served to mark the importance of Food Cupboard volunteers, but also marked the tenth anniversary of the Food Cupboard's founding.

The Food Cupboard, a non-profit organization, helps low-income Grant Township families by providing free food and other grocery items.

Available items include everything from hamburger to canned goods to laundry detergent. Supplies are distributed based on the number of people in each family.

Volunteers man the Food Cupboard from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays and Fridays.

The Food Cupboard is run by a board of directors, including Flint, co-director Alta Goodrum, Evelyn Slinn, Eileen Layden, Pat Vacketta, Wanda Ervin, Gloria Jahn, Paul Carder and Bill King.

Food coordinators at the site are Delores Crabtree and Marge Carlson.

Those wishing to volunteer at the Food Cupboard may call 283-5221.
