Casey's General Store adds liquor to product line in Hoopeston

The Hoopeston Casey's General Store, scheduled to open today, has added beer and wine sales to its line of doughnuts, pizza and convenience items.

The store received a Class B liquor license "in the past couple weeks," said Mayor Bob Ault.

Ault serves as the city's liquor commissioner.

The license will allow the store to sell beer and wine on carry-out sales only, Ault said.

The issue of the license was not discussed at Tuesday's city council meeting. But Ault said that as liquor commissioner, he may grant available licenses without council approval.

The council would become involved only if a business requested a license and none were available, he said.

The license awarded to Casey's was one formerly held by Jerry's IGA, Ault said.

When the store relocated, owners chose not to sell liquor, he added.

Casey's license is the second of two Class B licenses available. The other is held by Convenient Food Mart on Route 9.

The city has 11 liquor licenses, including five Class A, for taverns; two Class AA, for packaged sales of hard liquor; two Class AAA, for beer and wine sales on a dine-in basis; and the two Class B licenses.

Casey's paid $350 for the license, Ault said.

When plans were first made for the store to locate in Hoopeston, the availability of a license was not clear. Store officials said a liquor license was not necessary to open, but added they would request one if one should become available.

Gang activity hits Hoopeston - sort of Group holds fundraiser to expand local headquarters

A local gang was stopping motorists Wednesday, but unlike gang activity in major cities, these gang members were not stopping motorists to do bodily harm, steal their money or their cars.

This gang, called the Butter Cream Gang, was stopping motorists to purchase lemonade at their homemade lemonade stand.

Members of the gang, including Rachel Leigh, Mitchell Lankford and Ryan and Kristin Lander, were in the 600 block of East Maple Wednesday morning, peddling 25-cent cups of lemonade to raise money to expand their headquarters, a local tree house.

Gang members Ashley and Jonathon Drollinger and Abby Kuntz were expected to take the afternoon shift.

The group hoped to raise $5 from their efforts, but ended the day with a balance of $48.26.

Members advertised their endeavor by placing posters in Hoopeston businesses.

Wednesday, they offered not only lemonade, but iced tea. As an added bonus, they threw in free brownies or cake made by Rachel Leigh.

The members stressed that unlike most gang members, they are a "good gang" who plan to do helpful things for local residents, such as helping people across the street.

Gang members range in age from 7½ to 11.
