Rossville trustees table action on selling part of Deaton land

ROSSVILLE—A resolution to sell part of a 23-acre parcel of land recently purchased by Rossville trustees was tabled for public input.

Trustees Monday night shelved a resolution which would allow part of the property to be sold, giving residents time to express their opinions.

The parcel, known as the Deaton property, was purchased so a pond on the property could be used as a dumping site for clean fill.

Trustee Mick Braddock suggested waiting. "We need to tell the people around there," he said. "Give them a month, as a courtesy to the people who are there. The same people who are interested now are going to be interested a month from now."

Smith said while the village plans to sell part of the property, he is unsure how many of the 23 acres will end up on the market.

In related business, no action was taken on a list of suggestions for the property, submitted by resident Michael Atchison.

Atchison, a loss control consultant with Management Services, Inc., suggested the property be inspected monthly for conditions which might cause injury. Other suggestions included posting no swimming signs around the pond, prohibiting the use of dirt bikes or other vehicles and documenting all inspections of the property.

Copies of the suggestions will be sent to owners of property near the pond.

Chamber-sponsored seminar in time for holiday stress

"Stress is a factor in everyone's life, caused by jobs, relationships and, particularly at this time of year, holidays.

Since stress will always be a part of life, it is up to people to deal with it appropriately, said Dr. Joseph Zaccaria.

Zaccaria presented a seminar on "Dealing with Stress, Worry and Tension" last week. The seminar was sponsored by the Hoopeston Chamber of Commerce.

Stress is divided into two categories, Zaccaria said. Overload is when a person experiences too much stress, while underload is when very little stress is experienced.

There are "certain basic assumptions" about stress, he said. These include: some stressors cannot be avoided, everyone will experience stress, there is a choice between staying stressed or managing it, and learning stress management skills.

Zaccaria presented a list of strategies for dealing with stress in a healthy manner. They are:

Develop a healthy lifestyle - develop a positive attitude toward work; avoid smoking; develop regular sleep habits; exercise; have hobbies; avoid using drugs; have activities which are meaningful.

Recognize your stress response - the types and locations of your responses.

Monitor your stress level - general level of stress; direction of stress level; current responses.

Reduce stressors - use assertive skills, practice time management; deal constructively with conflict; alter your life script; financial management;
