Husband credits seat belt, car seat with saving family

"Use seat belts and car seats" is the message from a rural Rossville man whose wife and child were injured in an accident last week.

Paige Brown and her five-month-old daughter, Jenna, were treated and released from Hoopeston Community Memorial Hospital last Tuesday after Brown's 1987 Chevrolet Blazer rolled three times following an accident at Market and Penn streets.

Toby Brown, Paige's husband, credits seat belts and an infant car seat with keeping injuries to a minimum.

While camera equipment was being thrown around the vehicle, Mrs. Brown and her daughter were secure, Brown said. In fact, most of Mrs. Brown's scrapes and bruises came from equipment being thrown around the Blazer.

"You think when you're in town, the worst that's going to happen is you're going to crunch fenders with someone," Brown said. "She rolled that thing three times in town and got up and walked away."

Brown said his wife was like many drivers. "She almost never wears her seat belt in town," he said.

And, he added, getting Jenna in her car seat could be a battle. Often, when the family would travel locally, Jenna would be in her car seat on her mother's lap.

That has changed since the accident. "It's something we're really reinforced in now," Brown said about seatbelt usage.

As for the car seat, "we've been running errands and buddy, (Jenna's) strapped in now."

Brown and his wife are now telling others about the need to use safety harnesses, especially car seats. "You see so many people riding around with kids and they're not in car seats," he said. "If she hadn't been in her seat...I don't even want to think about that."

Firm to buy 2 C&S sites

Consolidated Grain and Barge Co. of Mandeville, La., has signed a letter of intent to buy former C&S facilities in Alvin and Henning.

The company has leased the elevators since October.

The sale is pending an environmental survey of the sites and approval by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Gerald Fines.

The C&S elevator in East Lynn is expected to be sold to Kaufmann Grain Co., and negotiations are underway to sell the Wellington elevator as well.

C&S filed bankruptcy in December 1993.

Trial set for rural Rossville man

The drug trial for a rural Rossville man has been set for Aug. 8.

Charles T. Allison, 43, last week pleaded not guilty to charges that he knowingly attempted to possess a mixture or substance containing cocaine.

Allison was arrested May 2 after a letter carrier delivered a package to his home. Over 458 grams of a substance including cocaine was found in the package.

Allison has been incarcerated since the arrest.
