High temperatures send two to hospital, others to local stores

Temperatures in the 90s, combined with humidity - and a heat index in the triple digits - had local residents scurrying to find a cool spot.

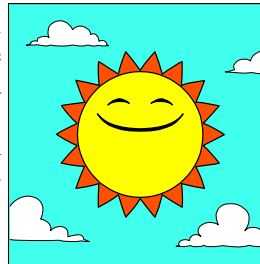

Two people were treated at Hoopeston Community Memorial Hospital for heat-induced conditions, said Sandi Thompson, emergency room nurse manager.

A man was brought in by ambulance Saturday night, she said, and a young woman was treated Sunday for illnesses stemming from the heat.

Although temperatures have cooled, Thompson said people must be prepared for future spells of hot weather.

The most important heat health tip is to drink plenty of liquids, Thompson said. "It's better if it's Gatorade or something like that," she said.

Sports drinks help replace electrolytes the body loses through perspiration, Thompson said. She recommends Gatorade because it contains less sugar than many other brands.

Cool water is good, both to drink and to use as a means of cooling the body, she said.

For those who have fainted due to heat, Thompson suggested removing all clothing and applying cool compresses to the underarm and groin areas.

People outside should be moved to a shady area or an air conditioned room.

During extreme heat, Thompson said people should limit the amount of clothing they wear, dressing lightly and in light colors.

New restaurant owner already looking forward to Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving might be four months away, but Jake Aliu, owner of Hoopeston's newest restaurant, is already planning for it.

Aliu, who has been in the restaurant business for more than 20 years, has a holiday tradition he plans to implement at the Red Apple Family Restaurant, 728 W. Penn - free Thanksgiving dinners for anyone who shows up.

"I feel good on Thanksgiving," said Aliu who last year served 470 free holiday dinners between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. "It's a restaurant and I give back to the people."

The Red Apple opened Monday in the former Hoopeston Family Restaurant.

It was not by chance that Aliu re-opened the restaurant. He got a first-hand look at Hoopeston and the eatery from his second cousin, former owner Joe Jusufi.

"I came to visit Joe and I liked Hoopeston," Aliu said. "Maybe I'm right, maybe I'm wrong, but I like the town."

The Red Apple will feature fare familiar to those who have dined at the former Hoopeston Family Restaurant. The menu includes homemade soups, daily specials and senior citizen discounts. "We're going to try a lot of things," Aliu said. "Some will work, some won't."

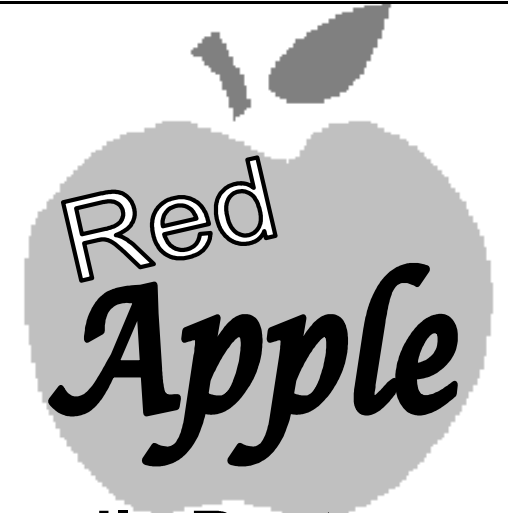

Aliu comes to Hoopeston from Princeton, where he operated the Coffee Cup for 15 years.

He and his family have moved to Hoopeston. The family includes his wife, Baftige, and children Tim, 17; Val, 16, Beana, 12 and Buddy, 10.

Residents who want to prepare for the next heat wave can stock up on fans and air conditioners.

Most local stores report a dwindling supply of cooling appliances and brisk business last weekend.

“We did very well,” said Denis Shenaut, manager of Pamida. “We had a really good weekend in sales.”

Shenaut said the store still has fans and air conditioners, but those could soon be gone. “If we have a weekend like we did, we’ll be out,” he said, adding weekend hot spells result in more sales than heat waves
