High school students hit airwaves to fight tobacco use

DANVILLE—Vermilion County students, including those from Hoopeston and Rossville districts, are joining to fight tobacco use by their peers and younger children.

The effort is the cornerstone of the Vermilion County Health Department's $68,331 Tobacco Settlement Grant, part of overall money distributed by the state following litigation against tobacco companies.

The teens are expected to meet with a production crew tomorrow at Insight Cable to work on anti-tobacco spots for television. Nine radio ads were also produced. Some of the grant money was set aside to pay for the advertising, said Linda Bolton, health department community relations coordinator/community health educator. "No one can do a better job of communicating with Vermilion County youth than our own teens," she said.

Following completion of the television ad project, students hope to create a five- to 10-minute educational video to use in all elementary schools next fall.

The video is expected to be produced by Dan Reed's Hoopeston High School media class, then distributed to the grade schools.

Bolton said the project is unique and exciting. "It's been wonderful to watch these kids work together, even those (schools) who in the past have met only in competition are working side by side."

Students were divided into three groups represent-

Emergency personnel respond to chemical spill at sewer plant

Members of the fire and police departments and local and county Emergency Services and Disaster Agency were called to the Hoopeston sewer treatment plant Thursday for a chemical spill.

An undisclosed amount of liquid alum spilled at the plant at 11:30 a.m. The chemical, which is non-hazardous, is used as a coagulant in water treatment and to remove nutrients, such as phosphorus, in wastewater treatment.

The chemical is also used in the pickling process and is available at many grocery stores.
