Forum continued from other side

on the U of I campus.

The meeting is expected to be an intensive question and answer session. Bill Graff, state executive director of the Illinois Farm Service Agency, will be a panelist, along with members from Johnson's congressional staff and Darrel Good, interim head of the University of Illinois Department of Agriculture and Consumer Education.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for farmers, before they begin harvest, and before the new Farm Bill takes effect, to get answers to the many questions that they may have," Johnson said. "This is the first time we've drastically changed farm policy in six years and I want to be certain that farmers in my district have ample opportunity to talk with me about the reforms. In addition, I'll have guests from my staff and from Farm Service Agency who are very educated about the intricacies of this legislation and will be more than willing to assist the farmers who participate."

The even is open to all farmers from the 15th District. Johnson noted that implementing the farm bill will take several months and that his office is always taking inquiries on the subject.

Those unable to attend the meeting but who need assistance with the new policy may call Johnson's Champaign office during regular business hours at (217) 403-4690.
