Hoopeston Area ends fiscal year over income, under costs

Hoopeston Area's finances for 2007-09 finished in good shape, with income coming in slightly over budget and expenses slightly less.

District treasurer Don Dean reported on the budget at Thursday evening's board meeting, telling the board that income in the education fund came in at 114 percent of what was budgeted, while expenses were at 98.5 percent of the budgeted amount.

Two state aid payments considered "early" by the state, added $455,000, while the foundation level for state aid was increased by $400 per student for a total of $335,00. Money for the summer migrant program for fiscal year 2009 came in during last fiscal year, adding another $80,000 to the coffers.

Dean said the state calling state aid payments "early" is "truly an illusion. They're really 350 days late," he said, adding the funding confusion dates back to 1992 when the state failed to make the last two state aid payments to districts throughout the state.

For the education fund, 34 percent comes from local sources, 56 percent from the state and 10 percent from the federal government.

On the expense side, being under budget nets the district about $140,000.

"We came out better, but not that much better," Dean said.

In the building fund, revenue came in at 102 percent, while expenses were 97 percent of the amount budgeted. The fund had a net deficit of $220,000, including $140,000 already on hand for the middle school roof project and $80,000 spent for a lighting project that will be reimbursed in this fiscal year.

In the building fund, 100 percent of revenue is from local sources, he said.

In the final fund highlighted—transportation—Dean said revenue was at 105 percent of the amount budgeted while expenses were at 95 percent, with a deficit of $73,000, "which was much better than we thought when the year started. Expenses came in pretty good, even though fuel took a gyration."

For the transportation fund, 38 percent of revenue comes from local sources, while 62 percent comes from the state. Last year, Dean said, the state actually funded transportation costs at 80 percent, rather than 80 percent of 80 percent.

After Dean's presentation, Superintendent Hank Hornbeck said he learned the state did not send out the fourth transportation payment by the end of 2007-08, decreasing revenue by about $60,000. Hornbeck added that the payment was expected Friday.

In related financial business, the board approved an estimated budget, which is "kind of like a shot in the dark," Hornbeck said.

The estimated budget must be done before officials know how much they will receive from local property taxes.

Next month, the board is expected to vote on a tentative budget, which will be followed in September by the real budget.

Hornbeck said the budget is expected to increase by about five percent.

In unrelated business, the board:

- Approved resignations from Ruth Siemers, Honeywell reading improvement aide and Jim Wisdom, bus driver.
- Approved hiring Kendra Flohr, eighth grade language arts; Earl Eells and Diane Goble, bus drivers; and Lori Montez, middle school personal aide.
- Approved a $9,753.90 bid from Ervin Construction for gutters for the middle and high school. Bids were also received from Built 2 Last Construction and Advanced Roofing.
