Tim Johnson issues statement on closed door negotiations

WASHINGTON, D.C. – U.S. Rep. Timothy V. Johnson strongly criticized the Congressional Democratic leadership for continuing health care negotiations behind closed doors, in conflict of President Obama's promise and in conflict with the basic premise of openness in government.

"This legislation could be the most sweeping change of law in decades in its direct and personal impact on the lives of every American citizen," Rep. Johnson said. "I, along with the rest of the public, had faith in the President's explicit campaign promise to have these hearings be televised. That faith has now been shaken by Leadership's arrogant refusal to include not only Republicans but many Democrats as well, not to mention the press and the public, from final negotiations on a bill that affects the most intimate and personal decisions of our lives.

"If the need for openness wasn't obvious before, it hit us full in the face as we learned in the aftermath of the Senate health care vote of the back-room deals that were made to ensure passage. Sen. Ben Nelson of Nebraska, who provided the final vote necessary, was promised 100 percent federal funding for the cost of Medicaid expansion. Vermont, Massachusetts and Louisiana – also represented by Senators vital to the vote – also were promised additional funding. That means citizens of Illinois and all the rest of the states whose senators did not negotiate sweetheart deals will be picking up the tab.

"Almost daily, as people are able to decipher what the Senate has passed, we learn of more insidious ramifications of this flawed legislation. Another bomb dropped yesterday when we learned that the marriage penalty on low-income and middle-income couples who buy insurance through exchanges will cost them $2,000 more than if they were unmarried and living together.

“This legislation will not reduce our premiums or the nation’s health care costs. It will reduce services now available to our senior citizens under Medicare and will expand the eligibility for Medicaid to an estimated 11 million more people - levels unsustainable by our states, small businesses and working Americans that have to bear the costs.

“Our economy is already in a deep freeze. State of Illinois revenue is down $5 billion from last year. State workers are facing furlough days. The University of Illinois administration, faculty and civil service staff are already being forced to take furlough days because our flagship university is owed some $436 million by the state.

“Illinois is not alone. Governors throughout the country, Democrat and Republican alike, are pleading that Congress revisit this issue.

“As the implications of this legislation trickle out, it is perhaps understandable that the Democratic leadership wants to retreat behind closed doors. It is consistent with their pattern of governance since taking control of Congress.

“The House of Representatives passed its version of health care late on a Saturday with virtually no chance to review, no amendments and no substantive debate. The Senate forced passage on Christmas Eve on a bill we still don’t understand. Now Democratic leadership refuses to allow a formal conference committee to work out the differences, and refuses to allow the public to witness their deliberations.

“These actions are indefensible and the public is outraged. It is not time to close the curtains. It never was. It is time to let the sunshine in and begin this process over from the beginning.”
