Letters to the Editor

Response to Tom Evans
 In response to Tom Evans' question about how I feel about the issue of the immigration law they are trying to pass in Arizona, I feel it is definitely racist and illegal according to our constitution. We have men and women of all races fighting in our wars and you should be ashamed to deny anyone of U.S. citizenship their constitutional rights. As for the justice part, all men are supposed to be created equal. Together we stand, divided we fall.
 I remember as a young boy that illegal immigrants were brought by busloads to Hoopeston to work in the fields, canning factories, etc. Men, women and children worked like slaves doing jobs no one else would do. They were housed in tin huts. Well now that there is no use for them, they are being treated like criminals. They are not here to make bombs and blow us up.

 The reason no immigration law has been passed is because of pure politics. Our congress cannot get a law passed because Republicans say no to anything that is proposed. Also, the immigrants crossing the borders would not come if there were no jobs or welfare to take care of them. That is also to do with politics. There would be no drug cartels if there were no big payoffs to government officials to turn the other way. The poor immigrants do not have the cash flow of big political leaders.

Why are Hispanics are being singled out when there are illegal immigrants entering this country from all over the world? They are here getting educated, taught military tactics and other training that could destroy our nation.

Congress is who you should be writing about, not the people. Congressional Democrats just want the vote and Republicans just want cheap labor. Instead of blaming the pawns, you should put the blame on the politicians that are causing these bigotries to be against friends and families.

If states were able to make their own immigration laws, an interstate war would surely evolve. There would be no blacks allowed in this state, there would be no Chinese allowed in that state, there are no Jews allowed per state rule, there would be no Cubans, etc. Let me make myself clear: if you look like any of these different races, never mind if you know anything of those countries, never mind if you know anything of those countries and don't even know how to speak their language.

I lived in Arizona for 25 years so I know how a lot of U.S. Hispanics feel about immigration, not just what the news media is trying to cash in on. They are hurt because even though they were born in the U.S. and many have put their lives on the line for their country, they feel they are being singled out as outcasts. Even though Arizona was once Mexico territory. You tend to forget that your ancestors were also illegal immigrants. The only real Americans are the American Indian.
