Hoopeston man sentenced to 20 years in 2009 murder

A Hoopeston man was sentenced Friday to 20 years in the Illinois Department of Corrections after he pleaded guilty to one count of murder.

Brandyn Calloway, 25, must serve the entire term, part of a plea deal in which other counts of murder were dropped.

Calloway pleaded guilty to killing Kelly Wright, 27, on December 30, 2009. Wright was found unresponsive shortly before 9 a.m. at a friend's house in the 500 block of South Fifth Street. According to autopsy results, Wright had been stabbed 11 times in her upper body.

According to reports, Wright and Calloway were at the friend's house the night before the murder. The couple got into a fight when Wright hit Calloway, who then left the home. Calloway later returned to the house and when into the kitchen to fix something to eat when the fight began again. Calloway, who had gotten a knife to fix something to eat, stabbed Wright after she hit him repeatedly. He then left the home.

Under terms of the plea agreement, Calloway will serve the entire 20 years, with credit for time served since his arrest.

Calloway could have been sentenced to 60 years if found guilty on the multiple charges.
