Local Audubon photos on display at library until April 22

A collection of photographs taken by members of the Middlefork Audubon Society are on display until April 22 at Hoopeston Public Library. The collection includes stunning photos of local flora and fauna and, of course, many pictures of birds.

The Middlefork Audubon Society was formed in 1995 as a chapter of the Illinois Audubon Society, which, established in 1897, is the oldest conservation organization in the state. Prior to 1995, the local group was known as the Vermilion County Audubon Society. Local members helped in passing the referendum which formed the Vermilion County Conservation District. Local members helped in passing the referendum forming the Vermilion Conservation district and volunteer at events in county parks and preserves. The chapter helps provide educational material for school classes participating in the district's "Outdoor School" program.

The society hopes to create greater awareness not only of their chapter but of local beauty.

The library is at 110 N. Fourth St., Hoopeston.

school district to compete for a grant of up to $25,000.

Monsanto introduced the program because farmers told company officials the most important thing to grow is the next generation. One grant will be awarded in each USDA Crop Reporting District (CRD) in Illinois and Minnesota.

Visit www.GrowRuralEducation.com, or call 1-877-267-3332 to nominate a school district. Nomination deadline is June 30, 2011.

Grants will be awarded based on merit criteria determined by the Monsanto Fund, need and community support. The more farmer nominations a school district receives, the more it demonstrates community support and strengthens their application.
