This spring season has really been different. We, in our trial garden back of the store and at home, are still at it and in spite of the extreme heat. We've watered and fed the little plants in packs and pots, and the large ones, too, sometimes twice a day, sometimes three, like morning, noon and night, so now we've got strong, healthy plants for you and for us.

Especially late coming this year were some of the herbs, like Magic Michael basil and that wonderful new one that really does keep rabbits and dogs away from your plants without poisons.

Some of the less-known plants like summer snaps, Angelus are grown because they attract butterflies and because they come in colors like sky blue, pink and purple.

I'm late and I know it, with the heirloom tomatoes this spring, but it's not too late for you to plant them if you come now! Known simply as "Old Irish" and "Old German, they are simply the best tasting tomatoes there are and they are truly heirlooms, a straight line from the families who saved them through generations from me
