Dick Read among inductees to county Business Hall of Fame

Three Vermilion County business men have been selected for induction into the Vermilion County Business Hall of Fame in 2014. Julius W. Hegeler II, Fred Faulstich, and Dick Read will be inducted during March ceremonies for family and friends.

Dick Read just sells cars, as he always explains when he introduces himself. He owns Crown Ford and Star Chrysler dealerships in Hoopeston, but learned early on how to give back to the community where he lives.

Continuing the car business his father began, Read sells cars and races cars with great enthusiasm. But his passion, beyond his family, is the Hoopeston community.

Read always looks at the positive side of growing his community. He contributed significantly to the survival and then growth of Hoopeston's hospital during his tenure on its board and he has been integral to a resurgence of economic development, including helping to create an economic development team of business volunteers who meet weekly, working with the Hoopeston City Council to move the community forward. Read was also a key member of the group that worked to raise the funds to establish a Danville Area Community College campus in Hoopeston that opened in 2013.

Julius W. Hegeler II was chosen by the selection panel for his business acumen, partnering with his brother and three others to found Peterson Filling and Packaging, which later became known as Peterson/Puritan, the world's largest contract packager of chemical specialties. Hegeler formed his foundation in 1992 to contribute to 501-C-3 organizations that are
