Central Illinois high school students visit Capitol for lesson in drafting, passing legislation

Last week I welcomed more than 40 high school students from central Illinois to the Capitol as part of a program I refer to as my "Youth Advisory Council." The whole idea of the program is to engage students in state government at a young age. The hope is that these students will remain connected to what is happening around them, and realize that they have a say in the laws we pass. This is how we help prepare the next generation to lead our communities, our state, and our nation.

Back in the fall, we hosted the students in Bloomington, where they heard from elected officials from several levels of government. We then challenged them to come up with their own proposal for new legislation. The students broke up into groups, with each proposing one new bill, then debated to pick the winning legislation.

Last week, the students came to Springfield for a tour of the Capitol, and heard from speakers including lawmakers, staff members, lobbyists, and even Governor Bruce Rauner. Then they were tasked with acting out a full legislative committee to debate the legislation they picked in the fall. Some students serve as members of an education committee, others represented lobbyists, concerned citizens, the governor, and members of the media.

The student-proposed legislation would have required all schools to allow home-schooled children from their district to participate in any extracurricular activity. On the one hand, this idea would create new opportunities for home-schooled students. On the other, it would create a new unfunded mandate on schools.

These aren't necessarily simple concepts to grasp, but these students vigorously took on their parts, leading to some very impressive debate. They had no problem elaborating on the issues at hand, and continued to delve deeper into the topic. In the end, I believe that these students showed that they are ready to serve as our next generation of leaders, and I have more faith in our state's future.

From the Blotter

A 40-year-old Hoopeston woman reported at 12:56 p.m. Sunday that someone took items from her home in the 800 block of East Seminary sometime between Friday and Sunday. Police are investigating.

Gilbert W. Warner, 53, of Hoopeston, was ticketed after an accident at 2:08 p.m. Sunday at Washington and Fifth Ave.

Police said Warner, in a 2014 Honda, was northbound, slowed for the intersection, then entered the intersection, hitting a 2003 Pontiac Grand Am driven by Haley Papanek, also of Hoopeston.

Warner was ticketed for failure to yield. No injuries were reported.

Weather

Breezy today. High 61. Tonight, partly cloudy. Low 39. Tomorrow, mostly sunny. High 57, low 35.

And in case you're wondering, the students are apparently aware of how hard unfunded mandates can be on our schools, because their committee voted "no" against the measure.

LOST & FOUND

On Tuesday, April 14, I attended the Fine Arts program at Honeywell Grade School at noon. I wore a turquoise/silver necklace and sometimke during the program, unnoticed by me, it came off. I have retraced my steps several times with no success. The necklace has a sentimental value to me and I miss it terribly. If anyone should find it anywhere, I would surely appreciate it if you would contact me or turn it in to the school office.

Thank you in advance.
