Memorial landscaped

The Viet Nam Memorial at McFerren Park has gotten a facelift thanks to new landscaping. The Dwarf Barberry bushes were moved and Everlasting Blue hydrangeas and mulch were added. The work was done by Chuck Strawser and his son. The project was funded by donations to Undercover Santa.

VC finances open to residents with new transparency tool

Vermilion County on Tuesday launched a financial analysis platform powered by OpenGov.com that provides residents, elected officials and staff unprecedented access to the county's finances. The web-based platform transforms complex financial data into an interactive, digital format enabling better analysis and understanding of the county's finances. The intuitive design makes it easier to explore how taxpayer money is collected and spent. The platform may be accessed on the County's website.

The OpenGov platform displays a user-friendly record of government spending and revenue detail. Users can view historical revenue and expenditure trends over time and explore multiple views of financial data, including by fund, department, expense, or revenue type.

For example, visitors may answer frequently asked questions such as "What did the county spend on salaries over the past year?" or "How much did the county collect in property taxes?" then share that information directly via email or social media.

Ryan Anderson, the County's Finance Director, led the initiative to make the county's finances more transparent and understandable.

"This is all about providing our Vermilion County team with cutting edge tools in financial analysis, part of an effort to step up our game as we strategically target resources in an effort to operate more effectively and transparently," said county board Chairman Mike Maron.

"By making its financial data easily accessible in an intuitive, digital format, the County is demonstrating its commitment to efficient, data-driven and open government," commented Zac Bookman, CEO and co-founder of OpenGov.
