Bismarck-Henning parents warned of possible early closure

Parents of students in the Bismarck-Henning school district were notified on July 19 that the district may not be able to reopen after Christmas break if the state doesn't start paying its obligations.

A letter from Supt. Scott Watson was sent to parents and posted on the district web page, www.bismarck.k12.il.us. In it, Watson said the district received not quite $2.8 million, $190,000 less than it was to receive.

There is currently no school funding budget for the current school year, which began July 1 and Bismarck-Henning has only enough reserve funds to remain open for the first semester. "There is really only 1 option at this time if there is no School Budget Funding; (1) open the doors in August and run until the money runs and we go broke, then we close our doors," Watson wrote.

State money makes up almost 34 percent of the district's total revenue, providing 45 percent of the educa-

Helping hands

Employees of First Farmers Bank & Trust of Hoopeston recently donated seven big bags of nonperishable foods and toiletry items to the Hoopeston Multi Agency's emergency food pantry. Executive Director Dana Schaumburg recently started the pantry for those who have exhausted all other assistance and who are in need of such items.  tion fund and 42 percent of the transportation fund.
 Watson wrote that the state must enact a school funding budget with adequate funds for the upcoming year but that legislators are deadlocked on a funding bill passed by both the House and Senate - SB1 - that would send $500 million to Chicago public schools. "This means less money down state school, therefore the Governor says he will veto it," Watson wrote.
 "The toxic climate at the Capital often leads one to avoid getting involved. Yet, as taxpayers and as citizens who are concerned about the health and future of the state, now is the time to be engaged," he wrote to parents, urging them to contact Sen. Jason Barickman (jason@jasonbarickman.org) and Rep. Tom Bennett (bennett@ilhousegop.emailnb.com) to let them know residents' feelings about the "current state of our state."
 Meanwhile, he wrote, he and Bismarck-Henning's board will monitor the situation closely and are "committed to doing everything we can to continue the outstanding educational services that your child deserves, and are committed to serving our school community."
