Milford girl, area FFA chapters receive ag-related funding

A Milford girl is one of 30 high school seniors throughout central and southern Illinois awarded a total of $60,000 in scholarships to pursue agriculture-related majors and careers.

Abigail Wagner was among those receiving a $2,000 per student scholarship, part of Farm Credit Illinois' agriculture program.

Wagner, daughter of Luke and Shelly Wagner, will graduate from Milford High School and attend Joliet Junior College in the agriculture transfer program.

WAGNER

This is the 15th year of the Farm Credit agriculture scholarship program which has awarded a total of $400,000 to 329 students since 2004.

Scholarship selections are based on a combination of academic achievement, participation and leadership in school and community organizations, and the applicant's commitment to an agricultural career.

"Farm Credit Illinois is proud to provide positive opportunities and lend support to young people with a passion for agriculture," says Rod Stoll, vice president of marketplace engagement for FCI. "These scholars will assume careers that shape the future of agriculture and Rural America, in turn Helping Farm Families Succeed."

FCI also announced a list of 4-H clubs and FFA chapters that will implement improvement projects in their communities with help from grants provided by Farm Credit Illinois. Fifty $400 grants were awarded.

Help an adult learn to read

The DACC Reader's Route will hold volunteer tutor training for those who want to work with adult learners. Tutor training is provided to equip the volunteer tutor with knowledge and resources to help the adult learner meet their educational goals. The Secretary of State, whose office funds the project, requires volunteers to complete 12 hours of training before becoming tutors.

Training will be Mondays and Wednesdays, April 9, 11, 16 and 18, 2018, from 8:30-11:30 a.m. at DACC, Prairie Hall, Room 106. To register, please call Brandice Connor, DACC Literacy Coordinator at (217) 443-8785 or email bconnor@dacc.edu.
