Reps Kinzinger, Miller split on election certification vote

Republican leaders representing the local area split on a measure objecting to certifying some electors in the 2020 vote for president.

Newly installed Mary Miller, elected to replace retiring John Shimkus in IL-15, issued a statement Tuesday, saying, "I will be joining patriotic leaders across the nation in objecting to the Electoral College results of certain states that did not uphold the constitution. Many Americans have lost confidence in the fairness of our electoral system. By objecting to certain electors on Wednesday, I hope my colleagues and I send a message to those men and women that we will not sit idly by while our Constitution is trampled on."

IL-15 includes Vermilion County.

Adam Kinzinger, representing IL-16, which includes Iroquois County, was one of 64 Republicans who voted with House Democrats to defeat the measure.

Kinzinger has been active on social and other media, such as CNN, recently, disparaging President Donald Trump's claims of voter fraud in the presidential election and calling for the President to concede the election

At 3:08 a.m. Thursday, Miller and Kinzinger voted in line with previous statements, with Miller ending up on the losing end of the 282-138 vote against the measure.

Illinois senators Dick Durbin and Tammy Duckworth, both Democrats, voted with the majority against a similar question, which failed 92-7.

The Capitol was briefly cleared after protestors made their way into the joint session of Congress. One woman was shot and others injured. The fracas was blamed on Trump supporters but independent media outlets have claimed some of the participants were part of riots which occurred last year.

From the Blotter

Curt Reynolds, 66, of Hoopeston, was arrested after police were called at 5:32 p.m. Wednesday for an incident of harassment in the 300 block of East McCracken.

After speaking with the involved parties, Reynolds was charged with disorderly conduct and released on a notice to appear in Hoopeston City Court.
