Entrants get six words to tell a story in new library contest

Legend has it that Ernest Hemingway once bet fellow writers he could write a story in just six words. They bet he couldn't. He grabbed a napkin and wrote: "For Sale: baby shoes, never worn." His friends paid up. And Hemingway called it his best work ever.

Now it's your turn!

To celebrate National Library Week, Hoopeston Public Library is holding a Six Word Story Contest for kids (3rd grade & up), teens and adults. The number of prizes will be based on the number of entries.

Guidelines:

- The story should provide a movement of conflict, action and resolution that gives the sense of a complete story transpiring in a moment's reading.
- Limit of two stories per contestant.
- Entries must be submitted by Thursday, April 1. By entering, you give HPL the right to post your story in the library and on social media. (Names won't be posted.)

Submit stories in person at 110 N. Fourth St., email joann@hooplib.org or send a Facebook message. Include your full name, age/grade (if under 18) and contact phone number or email address. For more information, call 217-283-6711.
