Vermilion Advantage seeks new leader as Dudley resigns

After three years at the helm, Tim Dudley has stepped down as head of Vermilion Advantage.

Dudley's resignation, announced September 12, was effective September 8, according to a press release from Nicole Van Hyfte, director of the Danville Chamber of Commerce, which is a part of Vermilion Advantage.

Todd Lee is now filling the roles of president and CEO on an interim basis as a search is launched for a permanent head. The search is estimated to take up to four months.

Lee is no stranger to Vermilion Advantage or economic development. He was the group's director of business development from 2008-2010 and, at one time, was the heir apparent to succeed VA's former director, Vickie Haugen.

Previous to his stint at VA, Lee was a regional manager for the Illinois Department of Commerce and Economic Opportunity. In 2010, he was named Danville Sanitary District executive director, the position from which he retired.
