Julie McCrory retiring as postmaster; open house Saturday

Early mornings at the office and late nights delivering packages will soon be a thing of the past for Hoopeston Postmaster Julie McCrory.

McCrory is retiring and is the guest of honor at a retirement open house that will be held Saturday at the Hoopeston Post Office, 314 S. Market. Residents are invited to stop by and say their farewells from 9 a.m. to noon. Refreshments will be served.

Watching mail carriers as a child, McCrory thought "it looked neat," and thought she might do that someday, she said when interviewed when she was named postmaster.

In the early 1990s, she applied, tested and was approved. She was hired and worked under three postmasters during her tenure, acting as officer-in-charge while the postmasters were away. She joined the ranks of Hoopeston postmasters on June 8, 2018. In her position, she has also overseen offices in Wellington and East Lynn.

An interim manager is expected to be named while a search for a permanent postmaster is implemented.
