Change and Chaos

I’m not talking about change in my piggy bank. Yes, I’m saving for a cruise some- day. Is it changing my clothes to work outside and tackle the weeds in my flower bed? Is it moving from a large two-story house to a one level ranch kind of change? OK! Here we go! Change of any kind is hard. That’s a fact. You don’t like it; I don’t like it! Real Chaos! Why? That’s a question each of us would answer differ- ently. We like the familiar.

Chaos when changing jobs, changing locations, change because of age, a death, marriage, babies, graduation, a divorce, fear, loneliness to name a few. For most of us we can mark several or all the items on this list! When chaos comes into our life, and it will, we must resist it at all costs.

Is there an alternative to accepting chaos in your life and mine? Yes! It is creating a positive perspective. It is getting your attitude in the right place. Knowing that this chaos will pass! What happens when you think, “I could make it through this chaos.” Your stress becomes less. It is amazing what our minds can do for us!

Don’t waste today thinking about tomorrow’s changes and chaos. Do not look forward to changes of this life in fear; instead look to them with hope!

Keep your mind limber by accepting what you can’t change. Decide to not let chaos take over. Concentrate on doing what must be done to make things better. We cannot avoid chaos in our lives. However, we can think positive; we can believe in ourselves; we can decide to stand up to chaos and do something about it!

We can be joyful and helpful to others, finding that is the key that locks chaos out!

School forum addresses safety, finances, several other topics

A variety of topics was covered in a forum sponsored by Hoopston Area School District Wednesday.

The evening began with Hoopston Police Officer Clayton Cahoe giving an update on school safety. County officers recently held active shooter ALICE (Alert, Lockdown, Inform, Counter, Evacuate) training in the district, he said. Training is done in age-appropriate ways for each building to minimize threats and vio- lence. “There’s no way to make sure nothing ever happens,” he said, adding police are not onsite every day - “generally only when something happens.”

Supt. Robert Richardson then took to the podi- um. “Have you folks ever been to a Gallagher show,” he joked, looking at empty seats in the front row, while the more than 40 attendees gathered in back row seats.

He gave a pared-down presentation on school finances “Because we all have to work tomor- row, we’re not going over the full gamut,” he said.

Districts get revenue from three main sources: local property taxes, state taxes that are distribut- ed based on an adequacy equation, and federal tax dollars provided as grants and other funding mechanisms. Grants and donations from other sources round out district funding.

Hoopston Area residents pay approximately $5.05 per $100 of equalized assessed valuation, Richardson said.

The district budget is divided into nine categories. The education fund, used to pay things directly related to teaching students, is the district’s largest fund for income and expenses. Other categories are transportation, opera- tion and maintenance, bond and interest, social security/ Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund, capital improve- ment, working cash, tort and fire prevention and safety.

After the financial presentation, Emily Brown, district curriculum director, and Craig Lee, board vice-president, read questions submitted prior to the forum. Some topics included:

Parental involvement in the schools. “We love paren- tal involvement,” Richardson said. There are multiple

Preliminary approval given for Thompson improvements

Officials have given preliminary approval for the full scope of Hoopeston’s plan to repair Thompson Ave.

At last week’s Hoopeston City Council meeting, Mayor Bill Crusinberry said preliminary approval was given at a September 12 meeting with Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT) and Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) officials.

Pending documentation, Crusinberry said a green light was given to the city’s plan to improve Thompson from the CSX tracks to the eastern city limits.

Tracy Fullen, engineer with Donohue & Associates, said previously that work from Market to the city limits was FHWA-eligible but she was unsure the portion from the tracks to Market.

Hoopeston will ask for FHWA funds to cover 80 percent of project costs, with the city picking up the remainder with motor fuel tax funds the city has been accruing for several years.

Crusinberry said the plan is to go out for bids between October and December 2020, with construction in 2021. He said the work is being done. Crusinberry hopes to address storm water issues in the area, saying he and Fullen are discussing ideas on how to handle it.

In unrelated business, the council:

- Heard from Al, Chad Yaden that cemetery cleanup will begin October 1.
- Received a request from Brenda Adams, Keep Vermilion County Beautiful director, to increase its donation from its current business level of $150 to corporate membership at $1,000.
